Our area had many cemeteries. For thousands of years persons who died were left to be eaten by animals. Europeans also often left the dead to be eaten by animals. After 1818 settlers buried their dead in shallow graves not far from where they died, without a casket or stone marker. After 1850-1855 most of the dead were buried in one of three cemeteries: The Bidell-Green-Weier Cemetery, (commonly referred to as Bunert Cemetery) The Warren Union Cemetery or the St Clement Cemetery. After 1880 many were buried at Mt Olivet On Van Dyke near Six Mile Road. There were almost no grave stone makers locally until after 1855. Many were buried without a casket or marker. Both the St Clement and Warren Union cemeteries date from 1850-1855 but both appear to be preceded by the Bidell-Green-Weier Cemetery.

In Warren Township the oldest recorded cemetery burials were at the Warren Union Cemetery, followed by the St Clement Cemetery. But between the A Bunert Farmhouse and the C Bunert Farmhouse Just N of Martin Road and West of Bunert Road, was an Indian mound which was 18 inches tall. It was most likely an Indian burial mound but this is uncertain. This mound existed prior to the settlement of their farm in 1849. It had become overgrown with weeds and shrubs so much that it was not particularly recognizable as an Indian mound and was missed on the early surveys. The settlers certainly were not in the habit of building mounds. The family reported that Indians came around often in the early days. They would read the sun like a clock and would disappear when the sun reached a certain angle. Indian artifacts have been found in the area. Local legends also give credence to the Indian mound theory. This area is generally flat and there is no logical geological explanation for a sand mound given the flatness of the surrounding area. Also considering that there was at least evidence of forty human remains removed from this site and that no archeologist was called in to evaluate the site so that there may have been other evidence that was certainly overlooked. Also consider that at least two dump truck loads of remains were trucked out of the site before it was discovered that at least one of them contained human bones. The family reported that other families sometimes brought relatives there for burial. I talked with one of the older Weiers and was told that their grand parents told them of a man who carried his dead baby for several miles to have it buried there as it was the only cemetery he knew about. Around this landmark early settlers from several families buried their dead. They probably did not know or care if it was an Indian mound or not. Whether or not it was will probably remain unknown as the evidence was destroyed and removed. Early farmers often raided Indian mounds to get pots. There was once a road that led from Martin road directly to this cemetery. I have it on an aerial foto and showing the mound in the 1960s. I shall call it the Bunert-Indian Cemetery for shortness but it was supposedly registered on the State of Michigan registry as the Bidell-Green-Weier Cemetery. I saw a 8 mm movie in about 1970 showing three burial vaults in which bones were being piled to be buried at Clinton Grove. It is now located on the southern half of the Briarwood school property. I spoke with the undertaker who performed the last removals. I found newspaper articles. And weirdly also found reports of ghost sightings believe it or not.
By the 1960s it was overgrown with Lilac shrubs that waved in the breeze. The Lilacs were planted by other families to mark the burial places but had become overgrown over the years. The family was forced by economic reasons to sell the property. The school district would have taken the property anyway as they wanted to build a school there. It was transferred about 1966. Mrs. Ida Weier told the school district that it was a burial ground and wanted all remains to be treated in a Christian manner. Bunert family burials were removed and reinterred at the Clinton Grove Cemetery in Mt Clemens. There were no other stone markers and all of the wood markers had rotted away and the little stone pebble markers were displaced so it was not particularly recognizable as a burial ground. But she also warned the principal that it was a burial ground. He called her a crazy lady. During construction a skull and other human bones were discovered. (Per Tri City Progress 4 14-1967) In May of 1969 children playing in the school playground discovered more human remains. Imagine the look of shock on the teachers face when they brought the remains into the classroom. Later the principal went over to Ida Weiers house and wanted to question her about the remains. She reminded him that he had branded her a crazy lady for even suggesting that it was a burial ground. One contractor dug a load of dirt for fill dirt and dropped it off on someone's property. The homeowner receiving the fill dirt found sculls and human bones and called the police who contacted the contractor. Imagine asking for fill dirt and getting human remains dropped off in your driveway. Wow was he in trouble. It wasn't very long when that kids were also showing off human remains from the mound. That finally got the officials attention. The school district wanted everything hushed up so no archeologists were called in and in fact it was them who hired a funeral director. The school certainly did not anyone to discover that this was anything other than a single family burial plot. But human remains of at least 40 humans were removed from what was left of the mound and the rest of the area was not explored. Historian Wesley Arnold states that he saw movies of this mound being excavated. William DuRoss the funeral director mentioned that Theuts, Greens, Hessels, and Schoenhers were probably buried there. So it was for sure a pioneer cemetery. Whether or not it was also the remains of an Indian burial ground had not been determined by scientific investigation and will never be never known as the evidence has been removed and scattered. And even though a few bones were removed the balance of the remains of those pioneer families remain underground. This historian does not believe in ghosts but must report many of sightings over the years by homeowners adjacent to the Briarwood School property. Several families and even children have reported sightings and strange happenings there. As a historian I am honor bound to tell the truth. Strange. This historian feels that a plaque should be erected at least on the on a bench on the grass next to the paved path that goes around the ball field that would and mark this as at least a pioneer cemetery.

Warren Union Cemetery

The Warren Union Cemetery is located between the Red Run River and Chicago Road East of Ryan Road. Pioneer farmer Peter Gillette settled here in 1833 and there were burials in the area of this cemetery before he sold more a parcels of land in 1845 to eighteen families for a burial ground. It is the second oldest cemetery in the city of Warren. The earliest burials were most likely stillborns or infants of the Gillette family and relatives. It is known that the Wilsons (relatives of the Gillettes) had burials here prior to this being as an official cemetery. It most likely has 1000-3000 burials. The Warren Union Cemetery historical plaque states it has 325 graves that date from the 19th Century. This is wrong and was not based on research rather by just counting old stones. (This did not count those not marked with a stone) Note more recent studies indicate at least over 500 graves date from 19 Century plus nearly 500 buried or sprinkled after 1900 that have a stone or stone fragment. If one counts unmarked graves there could be 2,600-3000. However no one alive knows as records were not kept. See details below.

The St Clement Cemetery is located on Engleman West of Van Dyke. It is the biggest of our area's pioneer cemeteries the first known recorded burial was March 27, 1854. It is possible that there were a few before that date. Over 800 burials date from the nineteenth century and over 1,500 burials prior to1943. See historian Wesley Arnold's 19 books about these 3 cemeteries which have pictures and indexes of all of the old grave stones in both Warren's Union Cemetery and St Clement's Cemetery. These two cemeteries hold most of the remains of the early pioneers of Warren. .

There were also local farm burials prior to 1850 but records of these are lost. One house on what was the old River Road has a stone marker. Yes stillborns, 1 day babies, and sick livestock were all buried on the farm prior to 1860. Visit my Historical web site warrenhistory.fyi thousands of pictures. Also

The other two remembrances I have is visit of the psychics with instruments 3 people who came in one afternoon. I asked them if I could help them locate their loved one. They replied no they did not need my help that they were here just to communicate with people. I looked around and I was the only one in the cemetery. (I thought ..hmmm ahh .OK...) So I asked if I could quietly come along. They turned on their instruments and soon took to all walking in the same direction without communicating between each other. They stopped at Lewis Busch. Lady #1 said "Yep" Lady #2 said "Yep" Man #1 said "Yep" Lady one asked out loud is this Amanda? Lady 2 said "gone" Man 1 said "gone". Lady 1 said That was the 2nd wife I offended her. And she left. All this happened before they actually read the names off the stones. They went around seemed to have trouble getting responses. I asked them if they could find the Fasel family for me. They stated " We will try." (Note That family name does not appear near the location. After a few minutes of them asking out loud for directions to the Fasel graves we found ourselves standing on the spot next to Qualmann. I asked them how you found that? They said well Joachim showed us. I later discovered that there was a Joachim Fasel and his grave was next to the Qualmann plots. I them asked them to find out if they could whether Edward Thimian died from a gun shot or illness. I took them over to the Thimian site. And they right away told me his mother was here but has no stone. They took a few minutes to seemingly ask about Edward Thimian and told me he died of illness not a gunshot. I found out later that they were correct. The 4th remembrance is the black thing. I will not talk about it. Where was it when the grave robbers were here?

Lastly I had placed several name marker bricks on grave sites where the stone is unreadable or where I have identified the person buried. This appeared to me to be a useful project which benefited visitors and history and cost the city nothing. However this project was brought to a screeching halt when the grave robbers started stealing the marker bricks and when the hysterical society insisted on 42 inch footings under each new marker. They don't seem to understand that this is not a commercial cemetery on new land but rather a pioneer cemetery used for over 160 years where graves were dug by hand and were often less than 42 inches to the corpse. Remember the corpse stayed in the home until buried which was usually the next day regardless of the weather. And consider that in the old days there was no undertaker. Consider a family digging a grave by hand in frozen temps or driving rain. They did not have pumps to pump out a grave. New born babies and still-borns were often not put in six foot deep graves. Sometimes they were just buried on top of their parents or grandparents which would put the body even closer to the surface. I have indexed six cemeteries. In one a sexton told me that they had to be careful even when placing flat 4 inch thick markers because sometimes bones were not too much deeper than that. So the hysterical society has managed to kill this historians projects.

There are hundreds of unmarked burials in this cemetery. At first suggestion of this it seems false but researchers who have studied this cemetery and others in older Michigan cemeteries have found that there are often many more persons buried than there are stones.

Warren Union Cemetery has hundreds of more burials than stones now show. Consider that the original 19 families who had lots 10 feet by 30 did not place stones. (that is 180-400 burials of which now only about 50 now have stones) And most had big families and they usually filled up their lots and had to buy additional lots here and elsewhere (We have proof of that from what Dorothy Cummings says about her family and records of other cemeteries verify this) and to accommodate the deaths from many diseases we now have cures for. Also consider that many stillborns and newborns were buried on top of regular already used lots and were rarely marked. Even now many families have baby graves without markers. Consider that the older graves were most often not marked by stones at all and that the older part of the cemetery was considered full by 1945 and many families had to buy lots elsewhere. Consider that there are 1000-3000 grave spaces even after subtracting aisles and drives. Consider that the "back" of the cemetery where many babies & paupers were buried extended much further than the now fenced in area and was destroyed by the 1950s Red Run project and by erosion since. The fence was erected in 1986. Families who suffered stillborn or baby deaths did not usually want a big funeral or a stone as there was a stigma about this. The family home served as the funeral home and most families just buried the remains in the cemetery quickly and privately and did not want a marker to remind them of a stillborn or sickly often unnamed baby which would prolong the sorrow of the guilt ridden grief stricken mother. The sister cemetery St Clement with good records shows 1.5-2 children buried for each adult with only about 6% of child deaths registered at the county.

Also the infant mortality rate back then was very high approximately 200 per 1000 per annum. Many other old cemeteries have hundreds of now unmarked graves many of which are children. Figure of the 1000 burials in Warren Union Cemetery only 150 show children. County death records which show only about 6% of child deaths of Warren show there are 500 child deaths per 1000 adult deaths average but that may only be a quarter or less oa actual child burials. Consider that only about 6% were even registered and considering the actual rate per the sister cemetery which is 1.5 – 2 child burials per adult and also considering the mortality rate there are hundreds of additional unmarked burials. Researchers have done the math of all of the above and say that there is high probability that hundreds of children and many adults are buried in Warren Union Cemetery without markers.

We should at least acknowledge that the possibility exists that there are hundreds of additional unmarked graves at Warren Union Cemetery and perhaps over 2,000 children.

Below is an alphabetical list of known burials. There are hundreds of more burials which now are unmarked. Most of them are children. And most of the children are infant burials which were never marked at all or only had a small stone most often with "Our Baby." These are still being uncovered and many have been moved or stolen or trashed. In most cases there is not even a registration of the birth or death. Many adult pioneers are buried here and now have no marker because the small original marker stones or cross is now gone. Many families did not have money to buy an engraved stone and there were no stone engravers in the area.

Many of the children buried here died terrible deaths from severe bowel inflammation, cramps, whooping cough, scarlet fever, and other terrible diseases we now have a cure for. There were several Baby or Our Baby small markers some have been stolen at least one was uncovered near the butterfly garden and was placed under the bench as a memorial because its original location was lost.

It appears that some low life has stolen that as of 2026.

These stones above are the remaining stones of a 180 years of neglect, weathering and vandalism. Also note that until 1986 this cemetery had no fence at all. I received a call from the mayors office as caretaker for this cemetery that a person saw two stones in a neighbors garage they think were stolen from our cemetery. In talking with the witness he did not to leave his name or address fearing repercussions. But he did state that teenagers were involved and he thinks it was done as a joke. I note that no stones have been returned to our cemetery.

Note on Soldiers and Veterans it is very probable that there are additional soldiers/veterans buried in this cemetery. Many widows did not have funds to buy a marker for their soldier husband. Some veterans died in poverty as some do even today.

And many pioneers and hundreds of stillborns, hour old babys, day old babys infants and children who died terrible deaths from the many childhood diseases which we not have cures for such as Whooping Cough, Scarlet Fever, Diphtheria, Typhoid Fever, Inflammation of Bowels, Summer Complaint often with severe pain.

Note many stones are difficult to read so families should check the original stone.
This list also includes recordings made in 1938, 1940, 1997 and Wesley Arnold's 2004 and 2010 studies. This is a list of stones and the people buried nearby. Of the likely 3,000 persons buried here only around 900 had stones many of which because of years of neglect are now unreadable. Both the stones and the bones below are slowly returning to dust. Stones are listed by Lot Rows starting as S W corner and proceeding East. Lot rows run South to north. (Wes Arnold a professional photographer took pictures of most older stones. Wes donates all of this free. It is on the website macombhistory.us

The* symbol means that it was listed on a walk thru prior to 2004. In some cases the stone no longer exists but I have listed the person buried nearby.
Example of numbering: R2-9ur translates to Row 2 nine yards North ur = unreadable
Hs = head stone fs = foot stone cs = corner stone us = unknown kind of stone partly buried Stones are numbered in order from South to North as of June 2010. Names are listed on the stone.
More means there are more difficult to read words. If there is no number in front of name stone is gone.
People buried there are listed if known.

Note many epitaphs are so worn that they cannot be read.

This older part of this cemetery was pretty much filled up before WWI In fact the cemetery had to be expanded several times by land acquisition. Families often had to buy plots elsewhere. In the old days it was a great inconvenience to have the cemetery far from the residence as the residence was also the funeral home. In addition to the graves being filled with adults and older children there were additional burials of still-borns and day old babies on top of burials and in the back of the cemetery. Even today virtually all of these are unmarked by any stone. People just don't want to be reminded still-borns and day old babies, many who never were even given a name, even today.

Paupers were also buried in this cemetery in unmarked graves.

American Legion Marker* The following found on a note: "The son Ormal Stevens killed in WWI was a constant tragedy to his parents. John slowly died of TB during my days in Warren. He was a fine looking lad and delightful companion. His folks built a little house in the yard of their home for him and tried to do all they could but he would not strictly follow the doctors orders. Bernice Stevens was my school teacher in the lower grades at Utica. She married Neil Kennedy who was for long years station agent for the M RR at Warren, then was transferred to Wayne Michigan. They built a house on the west side of the street running N &W starting just east of the city hall. Had several children. A fine woman, tall & handsome. Nele was short and slight. Other daughters Helen and also a son Nook. The Stevens home for long years was on east side of Chicago road about a block from the sharp bend coming from the RR track crossing ease. Mrs Ormal Stevens Sr was a Rickabus. Ormel Stevens Sr was drawing some furniture from --- RR depot to the village with his horse drawn dray and --- helping him was another local man all of whom with son were very profitably employed. During the work a man made a slighting remark about Stevens son when Stevens climbed back over the load and enraged he engaged in a struggle which ended when they both fell off the wagon. Ormal never ceased to call them a family of slackers."

Total graves 1000-3000 those marked around 1000 changes monthly being stolen, broken, or weathering. See research by professor Wesley Arnold for who is likely buried here. Note I never found out who was the person whose scull was found in a tree there or what was the disposition of it. If that happened today we would have coroner records.
